TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—The area now constituting the states of Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, and portions of North and South Dakota was organized as the territory of Wisconsin in 1836. The territory of Iowa was organized in 1838 from the portion lying west of the Mississippi, leaving what are now the eastern and northeastern portions of Minnesota still included in the territory of Wisconsin. In May, 1848, Wisconsin, with boundaries as at present, was admitted to the Union as the thirtieth state. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 2,632,067, which represents an increase of 298,207, or 12.8 per cent, since 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent.

The following summary shows the population of Wisconsin from 1840 to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—Wisconsin has 71 counties, of which 54 show increases and 17 decreases as compared with 1910. (See Table 1.)

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 55,256 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 47.6 (see Table 1), as against 42.2 in 1910 and 37.4 in 1900.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The counties of Wisconsin are made up of 1,704 primary divisions, comprising 132 cities, 324 incorporated villages, and 1,248 rural towns. There is also one secondary division, the village of Avoca, in Pulaski town, Iowa County. Four Indian reservations, which are independent of the county organizations, are located within the state. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—Wisconsin has 132 cities, of which Milwaukee, with a population of 457,147, is the largest. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city having 25,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of Wisconsin living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 38.2 per cent in 1900 to 43 per cent in 1910 and to 47.8 per cent in 1920.

TABLE I.—AREA AND POPULATION OF COUNTIES: 1850 TO 1920.

[In computing the percentage of increase from 1890 to 1900 for certain counties the population of Indian reservations in 1890 has been deducted from the total population of the county in order to make it comparable with the total for 1890, which does not include the population of Indian reservations. The population thus deducted in the several counties was as follows: Ashland, 627; Bayfield, 398; Brown, 635; Oconto, 222; Outagamie, 1,009; Sawyer, 873; Shawano, 1,631; Vilas, 661.]
